Schools open on tight budget

By WENDY HANSCOM

Most of the approximately 1,100 students returning to SAD #44 today no doubt have the same start-of-school anxieties as always—staying contemporary, keeping up with school work and settling down to the books after a long summer of scholastic freedom.

But for Superintendent Dewaine Craig, this school year begins with a new worry—an increased apprehension about the district's financial capability to support its already scaled back services.

"We are strapped," Craig said. "We usually have had enough money in surplus to cover if we lost a school bus or a boiler—we don't have that this year. We put all the surplus towards reducing the budget to keep tax bills down."

In January, the school board voted to have administrators prepare this year's budget with no increase in local property taxes. Such a move would have cut about $648,000 from the general fund budget. The vote to prepare the budget in this manner was unanimous, but directors made sure that it was a non-binding agreement—they reserved the right to add expenditures back into the budget.

Although a few directors constantly voted against "buying back" any programs, eventually the board abandoned the call for "no new taxes" and added $139,000 of programs and services—with the net result that local property owners had to come up with an additional 4.5 percent in school taxes this year.

But even with the local tax hike, the overall school budget is still down about half a million dollars.

To comply with this new fiscal reality the district has eliminated the gifted and talented program, moved Woodstock sixth-graders to Telstar Middle School, closed Bethel's Ethel Bisbee School, cut sports schedules and maintenance projects, shuffled school bus runs, cut back on personnel and reduced instructional accounts.

And further cuts may become necessary in the spring if small, unplanned winter expenditures mount up, Craig said.

An unplanned expense of $60,000 to $70,000 would force Craig to ask the school board to go back to district taxpayers and request more money, he said.

Examples of such one-shot expenditures might be a new school bus, a failed heating system or only one child moving in who requires services beyond those the district provides, such as residential care, Craig said.

EBS closed but heated

Closing EBS and moving all its students to CPS saved the district the cost of a custodian, a secretary, a food service worker and the telephone service. It will also save part of the heating and electrical bill.

The building's maintenance will be kept up to some degree, Craig said. The bulk of EBS will be used for storage. The district will still insure the building and plow the lot this

Telstar seniors' test scores up

But once again, girls outscore boys

The new school year is off to a positive start for this year's senior class at Telstar Regional High School. Recently released results from the Maine Educational Assessment tests taken by the class in April show the students performing above the state average in most academic areas.

The scores also show significant improvement from 1987, when the class took the 8th-grade MEA tests.

Once again, however, the latest MEA results suggest a persistent academic gender gap in the district, with local girls significantly outperforming their male classmates. This pattern, while common in SAD #44, is not reflected in statewide test results.

The overall test results for the class (both boys and girls) show the local youngsters outperforming the state average in four out of the six content areas tested, matching the state average in one (humanities) and dropping below the average only in writing—a traditional district weakness.

The local 11th-grade results were, on the whole, also well above those for school districts with social and economic characteristics similar to SAD #44.

Most importantly, the latest results show that in the three years since taking the test in 1987, the class improved its performance in five out of the six content areas. (See score box, page 1, for the latest results; "How the state testing works," page 3, for a description of the testing process.)

The class' greatest improvement came in science, where its score jumped from 220 (30 points below the state average) to 395 (115 points above the state average, and only 5 points from the highest possible test score, of 400).

Its social studies score also jumped by more than 100 points and its reading score by 70 points.

The only score to fall off during the three-year period was in writing, which declined from 265 (15 points above the state average) to 245 (25 points below the new state average).

Sixty-five of the class's 68 students (96 percent) were included in the 11th-grade test, a slightly higher percentage than in the state as a whole.

Eighty-nine percent of the students tested at Telstar as 11th graders also took the 8th-grade test here. The remaining 11 percent had transferred into SAD #44 since 1987.

Local gender gap

Frequently in the past, SAD #44 MEA results have shown local girls to be outperforming their male classmates. That pattern continued with the latest results.

Statewide, the average scores for boys and girls are nearly identical. Boys do better in

Andover parents protest school bus route changes

Continued use of EBS takes heat

By WENDY HANSCOM

The SAD #44 Board of Directors is already feeling the heat from this year's half-million-dollar-budget cut. A dozen upset Andover parents, including selectman Fred Emerson, showed up at the board's Monday night meeting to complain about bus route changes that would force 10 students to get on the bus a half hour earlier.

Parents were also angered by a planned Andover bus detour into Newry. After the Andover bus is loaded with students heading for Telstar schools, it will then leave Route 2 along the way and make a two-and-a-half mile run up Route 26 to pick up Newry students.

Parents voiced their concerns about the changes for 45 minutes at Monday's school board meeting, which was held in Andover. They complained that their children spend too much time on the bus already and that parents were notified about the change until just two days in advance of the

DEP licenses tire site

By MARK SHANAHAN

The Greenwood Board of Selectmen planned to meet yesterday evening (Tuesday) "to decide a course of action," following the state's licensing of a storage facility containing an estimated 210,000 used tires off the Rabbit Road, according to board member Marie Bartlett.

On Monday, a spokesman for the Maine Department of Environmental Protection, Deb Garrett, said Commissioner Dean Marriot signed the operating license for Peter Gordon of Albany Township Friday, and copies of the agreement are being mailed to Gordon and Greenwood selectmen.

The selectmen had appealed to Marriot earlier this month not to grant the license. They contended that the site is a dump, not a recycling facility.

Among other concerns they raised was the town's financial responsibility if Gordon's business fails; fire safety and accessibility to the tire piles, which the town says cover 30,000 square feet; and Gordon's past refusal to cease operations despite two orders from the state and the town regarding environmental law violations.

Bartlett said a delay in the proposed licensing, which was expected to come by Aug. 8, had led the board to believe "the commissioner" was considering some of our concerns. But apparently that isn't the case."

Tri-Town Rescue running out of gas?

By WENDY HANSCOM

For the first time in its ten-year history, Tri-Town Rescue and Ambulance Service is facing some tough financial problems.

"Everything is going up and our income is going down, and the two are beginning to squeeze us," Ambulance Chief Grace Archer said.

The funding problems for Tri-Town are caused by a number of seemingly small things that, taken together, add up to a big financial headache:

- funding from the organization's auxiliary is down.
- one member town cut its appropriation to Tri-Town at town meeting time.
- operational equipment is expensive.
- there are not enough volunteers to cover the day shift, so Tri-Town has to hire EMT's to fill in.

From its beginning Tri-Town Rescue has had the support of a dedicated hardworking auxiliary, but many of its members are burning out.

Auxiliary President Doreen Benson estimates that only 40 percent of auxiliary members are "really active."

"We're losing money. We're not able to get out there and get the money we need. Some of the problem is that the money's just not out there and some of it is that we just don't have the people to go get it," Benson said. "I need more members who are willing to be gung ho and raise money."

Chief Archer said that the organization counts on auxiliary fundraisers to bring in about $10,000 per year, but this year Benson said the group would be lucky to raise $4,000.

In the past the auxiliary has raised money for routine operational expenses, a new ambulance barn in West Paris, a new ambulance and additional equipment.

Fundraising projects have included an annual variety show, quilt raffle, public suppers, flea markets, walk-a-thons, bike-a-thons and a variety of other projects.

Archer said, however, that a number of the auxiliary volunteers are older, retired people. They have time on their hands, Benson said, but because of their age, "not all of them have the physical ability to do some of the things we need done," such as waiting on tables at public suppers.

operational costs are also soaring. The service has two ambulances and an equipment van.

One 10-year-old ambulance is housed in the town garage in Woodstock. The other two-year-old ambulance is at the barn in West Paris. Archer said the service would like to replace the ambulance in Woodstock with a new one.

In June of 1981 Tri-Town paid about $18,000 for a new ambulance. Now, a new ambulance costs between $50,000 and $75,000, Archer said. "The cost of ambulances has almost tripled, medical equipment is expensive and our radios and scanners are 10 years old and they're starting to die."

Bacon explained that the older ambulance doesn't have a lot of mileage, but it still needs replacing. "Emergency vehicles don't get a tremendous amount of mileage, but they get hard mileage. When they're needed they're pushed and pushed hard. Everything has to be tip-top, people's lives are at stake," he said. A crew of volunteers checks the ambulances weekly, Bacon said, and the older ambulance has had a number of costly repairs this year.

Not only is Tri-Town short of auxiliary volunteers, it also needs more ambulance attendants, especially on the day shift.

The service now must hire Emergency Medical Technicians to cover any open day slots not filled by volunteers. Archer said volunteers are scarce during the day because most members hold day jobs. The EMT's are paid on a per diem basis whether they go out on any calls or not.

In order to offset some of the mounting expenses, Tri-Town reluctantly discontinued its free service to individual patients in 1989. Bacon said that the rescue service didn't bill people before 1989, but in some cases customers had insurance that would pay for the call. So Tri-Town decided to bill users instead of raising assessments to member towns.

Bacon said people grumbled some about the change, but generally accepted it as inevitable. He added that people also complained when the service began to follow state mandates regarding when to call in more advanced services.

President, Tri-Town Rescue Auxiliary

The auxiliary not only provides money to Tri-Town, but also plays a greater role in the organization, Archer said. "The auxiliary provides a lot of moral support to the ambulance service itself and has a great deal of rapport with our member towns. The auxiliary keeps us all together as one big family," she said.

Tri-Town also gets funding through taxation of its member towns—West Paris, Woodstock, Greenwood and Sumner. This year West Paris selectmen decided to cut all "social services" by 10 percent—including Tri-Town, according to EMT and Membership Committee Chairman Ken Bacon. "Everyone is trying to cut back," Bacon said, "selectmen and taxpayers and it's hurting us."

The organization charges its member towns based on the town's population. Bacon said West Paris is the largest member town and has by far the largest number of ambulance calls.

Chief Archer said that Tri-Town's

THEY WANTED WILDERNESS, SO GIVE THEM WILDERNESS

To the Editor:

Local people have shown a lot of interest in the designation as wilderness of 12,000 acres of land in the Caribou-Speckled Mountain area of the White Mountain National Forest. Recently, Chad Converse, District Ranger of the Evans Notch Ranger District requested input from individuals and associations regarding management of this area. A copy of the letter the Multiple Use Association (MUA) sent in response to this request is enclosed and we feel may be of some interest to your readers.

Although the land is subject to specific restrictions as a federally designated wilderness area, the USFS continues to seek public input regarding potential management decisions for this area, and members of the public should make their feelings about this area known to the Forest Service.

MUA still feels that the public would have been better served if the area had been kept in multiple use. The simple fact that the designation is now on maps, increases interest in it and is bound to lead to its degradation from overuse. This has occurred in many other federal wilderness areas.

Dear Chad:

Please consider our comments as you develop the Caribou-Speckled Mountain Wilderness plan.

- In your letter, you mention that the framework calls for flexibility. We believe that any plan which is developed should be based on the criteria of land designated as wilderness. A failure to adhere to the criteria for a wilderness designated area would be unfair to those who fought so hard to see that Caribou-Speckled was designated as a wilderness. We would be particularly upset if some of the more difficult wilderness restrictions were eased and vegetation management restrictions were not.

- The Caribou-Speckled Mountain area has a long history of vegetation management. We feel very strongly that wilderness ethics education is a must, for both wilderness and multiple use areas.

- There should be a high level of signing so that wilderness boundaries are clearly marked.

- Timber sales should be permitted right up to the wilderness boundary lines. I believe you will find that the Maine Congressional Delegation was very specific on this point.

- Because of the added effort required to maintain wilderness trails with no mechanical tools, an effort should be made to find volunteers to aid the USFS in its work. Perhaps the Natural Resources Council of Maine would be a good place to find volunteers.

- There should be no backcountry campsites that include man-made structures. This is contrary to the intent of the designation and will upset visitors who are visiting the area to get away from all signs of human intervention.

- Those who promoted the designation of Caribou-Speckled as a wilderness area stated that it would provide a laboratory to study wilderness ecology. We would like to receive information on how this goal will be accomplished.

- We feel that Maine's only National Forest System wilderness area is one of great beauty because it is in an area which has received intensive vegetation management. We feel that this is a real tribute to the aesthetic benefit of harvesting. Unfortunately, the beauty that sets the area apart will be short lived without the benefit of continued vegetation management.

- We are most interested in seeing that the wilderness area be managed as intended and would like to be included in a Caribou-Speckled Ad Hoc Committee if one is formed.

Y. Leon Favreau
We would like to thank all who supported our multiple use position. Even though we lost, I want to assure you that we were heard, and it is likely that we helped educate some people about the environmental benefits of a working forest.

If anybody would like to comment to the USFS on Caribou-Speckled, they may do so until Friday, Aug. 30. The designation cannot be removed, but we can make certain the USFS lives up to the intent of the legislation and those who called for wilderness get what they wanted.

MAINE'S PRISON SYSTEM IS OUT OF CONTROL

To the Editor:

I have recently received a copy of the state's biennial budget signed into law by the governor. It's 654 pages and an interesting document. As a temporary resident with the department of corrections, I focused my attention therein. What I learned is probably reflective of all state departments functioning on misinformation and misinformation.

Instead of warranted across-the-board cuts, the D.O.C. budget will increase by $14 million. For the large part this is to cover costs for the new white elephant super max prison in Warren, where 100 new state employees will supervise 100 new residents. It will be the only state prison in the country with catered meals and laundry.

Maine citizens should also be aware of another new budget fact. The present cost of captivity in our prison system is now the nation's highest, with the lowest per capita income level. The present cost per man is $39,954 per year. This figure is arrived at by dividing the total D.O.C. budget of nearly $70,000,000 by the 1,750 men in the system, and this doesn't include county jails or city lock ups. Add to that about $10,000 or $15,000 that our families draw in entitlements while we are here.

Chief Justice Donald P. Lay of the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals, in an address recently to the National Association of pre-trial service agencies stated "Our American criminal justice system and prisons are a disgrace to a civilized nation that is supposed to pride itself on ethics and decency." Need I say any more.

We all must do all we can to straighten out and scale back Maine's corrupted multi-million dollar industry of waste. An industry encompassing not only misnamed corrections, but the courts of prosecution and law enforcement from function as a conspiratorial triad out of control. These systems need a total cleansing and revamping into something ethical, moral, productive, and above all accountable. Thank you and God bless you all.

W'stock zoning meeting set for Thursday night

Woodstock will hold a special town meeting Thursday, 7 p.m., in the town office. Residents will be asked to approve proposed shoreland zoning regulations changes and to authorize the purchase of a low-bed trailer.

The shoreland zoning changes have been proposed by the town's planning board. Board members said they followed the state's minimum requirements while updating the zoning plan.

The new trailer would cost about $7,500, and the selectmen propose paying for it out of the tree growth account, Maxfield said.

COMMUNITY SPIRIT IS ALIVE AND WELL... AND WORKING IN MIDDLE INTERVAL. Three dozen volunteers turned out over the weekend to help rebuild a Carter's Farm barn burned in an early spring fire. Mahoosuc Land Trust awarded grant Marcel Polak is named executive director

The Mahoosuc Land Trust, a non-profit conservation organization which accepts gifts of land and conservation easements, has been awarded a $12,000 grant from the Bethel Fund of New York.

The funds will be used to hire Marcel Polak as executive director of the organization. The half-time position will allow the trust to respond to the growing demand of landowners seeking help with long-term stewardship of their properties, according to two trustees, Kirk Siegel.

In its first two years of non-profit status, the trust has been given a seven-acre canoe landing on the Androscoggin River, and a conservation easement on a 204-acre working tree farm in Upton.

Polak, whose natural resource credentials include membership on the Woodstock Planning Board, the Woodstock Conservation Commission, the land trust's board of directors, and directing the Dover Plains Environmental Education Center from 1975-78, said he sees the position as offering an opportunity to continue assisting landowners with long-term management of their properties, and in addressing their tax and financial requirements, concern for the land, and future family needs.

"We have protected about 207 acres and have proposals and possibilities for many more. The Mahoosuc Land Trust is recognized as a positive force in this community," Polak said.

Polak's 20 hour per week commitment to the Trust will be complemented by work toward a master's degree in resource management.

The two-year graduate study, which Polak is financing himself, will include courses in land trust work and other natural resources issues which will have a direct benefit to the Trust.

Siegel said, "Marcel's experience covers a lot of areas that will be extremely helpful—like land use, wildlife, real estate, and working with towns, to name a few—he should be a real resource to local communities and individuals."

The Trust's appeal to the Betterment Fund was based on the significant community support that the organization has garnered since receiving 501(c)(3) non-profit status from the IRS two years ago. According to the Trust, membership doubled from 35 to nearly 70 over the course of the fall, from gifts ranging from 10 to 500 dollars. The group's annual meeting and special program will take place on Sunday, Oct. 30 at 6 p.m. at the Moses Mason House.

FROM THE Bethel Town Office

As you may have noticed, the construction phase of the Downtown Revitalization Project is nearly at an end. Mason and Spring streets should soon be passable again. Elm and High streets are nearly completed. Elm and High streets on Main Street are scheduled for paving in early September. By this time next month, the aggravations of the summer will be, one hopes, fading memories.

The weather of the past two weeks has not been helpful. Several inches of rain on freshly laid curb trenches made for treacherous going on Main Street both to vehicular and pedestrian traffic. My thanks to those who bore the added inconvenience with the same meted good humor with which they met the hurricane itself.

Although the law allows little liability during natural catastrophes (or construction projects), people who have experienced real damage to themselves or their property should complete a contractor's complaint form, available at the town office, to begin processing claims against Scott Construction.

The board of selectmen has authorized me to apply to Farmers Home Administration for funding to continue the sewer and storm drain collection system renewal. The application is for $384,000 and will cover the cost of lower Main Street, the rest of Railroad Street, and a portion of Cross Street. If and when the town's pre-application gets through the first vote on the issue.

The selectmen have voted to build a small transfer station behind the Public Works Garage to handle the trash currently being dumped in the landfill. You probably know that the town is required to close the Bethel Landfill by Dec. 31, 1991. The details are still being worked out and we will publish as much information as possible before any changes go into effect.

One change which happened too quickly for most of us is the new separation of colored glass at the recycling center. The market for green glass has apparently dried up; therefore the Oxford County Solid Waste Corporation will take only brown and clear glass.

We regret the confusion this is bound to cause many who are in the habit of mixing all tinted glass. Look for Dick Hosterman at the Recycling Center on Channel 4 for an instructional and motivational tour of the bins. And Dick, will you remember your old friends now that you're a star?

THIS WEEK AT THE Moses Mason House

All members and friends of the Bethel Historical Society are reminded that the 28th annual meeting will be held on Thursday, Sept. 5, in the meeting room of the Dr. Moses Mason House, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

A potluck supper will precede the meeting at 6:30 p.m. Anyone attending the supper should bring a hot dish, salad or dessert.

During the business portion of the meeting, the Nominating Committee consisting of Mary Keniston, Arlene Lowell and Frank Vogt, will present a slate of officers and one trustee for consideration. The fifth annual Marjorie MacArthur Noll Volunteer Service Award will be presented to an outstanding volunteer. As this year is the Society's 28th anniversary of existence, there will be an official observance of that important milestone.

Following the business meeting, Earle G. Shettleworth Jr., director, Maine Historic Preservation Commission, will make a slide presentation, "The Palace in the Woods: The New England Summer Hotels of John Calvin Stevens."

Mr. Shettleworth, a native of Portland, is a graduate of Colby College and Boston University. No stranger to Bethel, he has spoken to the Society on a number of occasions, including being one of the featured speakers at the Society's 10th anniversary festivities in 1976.

A leading authority on Maine's architectural heritage, Mr. Shettleworth has studied the work of John Calvin Stevens, who also designed the Bethel Library and the steeple of the Congregational Church when it was replaced in the 1920s. The meeting is open to the public and anyone interested is cordially invited to attend.

Ranchers help shoot down military's plan for low-level overflights in Oregon

By JANET O'CROWLEY

(Note: the following article is reprinted with permission from the most recent issue of SkyGuard, a publication of the Rural Alliance for Military Accountability. In view of the recent National Guard proposal to lower the training floor in the Condon Military Operating Area, which is located over this part of western Maine, we thought the article would be of interest to some of our readers.)

The Idaho National Guard has indefinitely postponed its plans to lower the floor of a 43,000 square mile airspace designation over rural areas of neighboring Oregon. The military cited a number of reasons for its withdrawal—almost as many reasons as it had for the proposal in the first place—but the strongest one may have been the spontaneous and unified public opposition mobilized against it.

The Air Guard said it needed to drop the floor of the Saddle Military Operations Area (MOA) to accommodate the Air Force's expansion of the Saylor Creek Bombing Range. The U.S. Air Force made an additional justification for the proposal, saying F-4 jets transferred to Mountain Home Air Force Base in Idaho as part of a base closure needed a place to train.

The military designation already allows use of the airspace down to 3000' Above Ground Level (AGL). The proposal would have given military aircraft primary down to 300' AGL. Private and commercial aircraft could traverse this area only at their own peril.

The MOA stretches from near the Idaho border almost to the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge, and from just below the Warm Springs Reservation to Burns Junction in the south. The "empty" high desert parcel fits nicely in between US 20, US 95, and Oregon State Route 78, and includes the Owyhee Reservoir, a popular recreation area, as well as the Owyhee River, which has been designated as "wild and scenic."

Faced with impending budget cuts and a lack of an identifiable "enemy," though, the Air Force had to prioritize its programs. When the Saylor Creek expansion was put on hold, the ideas of a grand cooperative training range had to be scuttled.

The scarcity of dollars "wasn't the total justification" for dropping plans for the Saddle MOA, said Air Guard airspace manager Major Jay Stevenson, "but we realize our timing was pretty lousy."

There used to be a radio comedian named Elmer Blump, a low-pressure salesman. When he knocked on a prospect's door, his standard line was, "Nobody home, I hope, I hope, I hope." Elmer Blump could have been the public relations officer who advertised the Saddle Low MOA draft proposal in August 1988. To be kind, we will just say the proposal was not widely disseminated.

The people one would expect to respond to a proposal of this kind, didn't. Ranchers of Malheur County were quiet. The Governor's office later claimed never to have heard of it. Public lands watchers in Idaho, including the Committee for Idaho's High Desert, certainly were not alerted. If one person—Gary Brown of Ontario, Oregon—had not secured a copy of the draft proposal and sent it to friends in Idaho, the whole Environmental Assessment might have been reviewed and accepted by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) with no one the wiser.

As it was, Brown's Idaho friends let the draft proposal sit on the bottom of a stack of "urgent!"

mail for months while the proposed Saylor Creek expansion absorbed their entire energies.

When the proposal came to the attention of Robert Stevens, a Ketchikan, Idaho rancher and private pilot, he made a logical connection between the Saylor Creek expansion and the Saddle Low MOA. Although both the Air Force and National Guard disclaimed any linkage between the proposals, each one allowed for "occasional use" by the other.

"Saddle MOA is seven minutes flying time from the Boise Air Guard base and eight minutes from Mountain Home Base," the Saddle proposal noted. There were other identifications of a connection.

The military training routes (MTR's) of both ranges were continuous, and all fed into the enlarged Saylor Creek range.

The fortunes of the Saddle Low MOA have waxed and waned with the Saylor Creek proposal.

Both proposals followed closely upon the recommendation of the Pentagon's Base Closure Commission that all military branches take steps to acquire large blocks of open airspace left on the map before civilian "encroachment" made them undesirable for military use.

Most curious of all, though, the Air Guard already had FAA authorization to fly down to 100' AGL for all about 200 square miles by virtue of existing MTR's. It's hard to believe that the Guard would go to all the trouble of an Environmental Assessment in order to relinquish 200 vertical feet of airspace, unless, as Stevens suspected, the Air Force were the principal agent behind the proposal.

Stevens circulated his conclusions for reactions from the Air Guard, the Air Force, the offices of the governors from both Oregon and Idaho, the news media, the Aircraft Owners and Pilots' Association, and various wildlife groups. He encountered ignorance and anger.

AOPA was licensed to learn that pilots might lose the well-used corridor between Boise and points west. The North American Wild Sheep Foundation's reaction went off the scale, as many wild sheep hunters are also partial to chukar hunting among the cliffs and slopes of eastern Oregon. The office of Oregon Gov. Neil Goldschmidt professed a lack of information, even though the proposal would consume all the airspace overlying 43,000 square miles of his state. Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus deftly deferred all inquiries to his Bureau of Aeronautics.

But it may have been the cattlemen who made the biggest difference.

Bob Skinner, a Jordan valley, Oregon cattleman, called a meeting to discuss the issue. It was the first time many of the 100 ranchers in attendance learned anything about it.

Skinner uses a light plane to check on the extensive irrigation works on his ranch. "You have to use aircraft," Skinner said, "and these (military) guys are right down on us, whipping along at 500 mph. It's not good."

Both the Idaho State Patrol and the Ontario (Oregon) Argus-Oregonian covered the complaints of the ranchers, who equated the airspace appropriation with a taking of the land by adverse possession.

The plans for the Saddle Low MOA were withdrawn within a month of the meeting. (SkyGuard's may be reached at: 2455 N. 47th St., Milwaukee, WI, 53210, or by calling the organization's hotline at 1-800-SKYGUARD.

Unlicensed pesticide retailers face fines

Over 100 Maine retailers will receive an expensive letter via certified mail in the near future. The letter—offering out-of-court settlement—was ordered unanimously by members of the Maine Board of Pesticides Control (BPC) on Aug. 7 in what is the latest and severest effort to enforce a three-year old law requiring pesticide retailers to hold a dealer license.

The 1988 law requires all outlets selling most general use pesticides to obtain a pesticide license and submit annual sales reports which identify the types and amounts of products sold.

The intent of the law is to establish a mechanism for determining whether specific pesticides used in large volumes warrant closer regulation as well as for alerting dealers should an emergency regulation affect one or more retail products.

General use pesticides consist of over-the-counter products such as lawn, garden, and household pest control products.

"We've drawn our line in the sand when it comes to the most flagrant violators of this law," said BPC Chairman Thomas Saviello after hearing testimony against four central Maine businesses. All four failed to comply with the law after receiving written notification of the law followed up with licensing information—hand delivered three times by pesticide inspectors during on-site inspections. According to a current BPC probe, over 100 other businesses in Maine have similarly ignored overtures made by the state agency.

"We definitely want to send a message that we don't have the time or manpower to chase down dealers to become part of the licensing," noted Saviello. "Obviously, a significant deterrent is in order."

The maximum fine for non-compliance of the licensing law is $1,500. The annual fee for a general use dealer license is $20.

In his direction to BPC staff to pursue violating dealers, Saviello underscored the importance of this law: "There is a false impression that particular pesticide products are 'safe' just because they can be purchased at the local hardware store. The dealer reporting requirement is the only way we have to track down potential problems caused by widespread use of homeowner products."

Drivers urged to use caution as school opens

With schools opening for another year, the Maine State Police are reminding motorists to use caution when driving near school zones.

"Youngsters starting a new school year, many times, are not paying attention to pedestrian safety so it's up to drivers to make that extra effort to watch out for them," said Colonel Andrew E. Demers, Chief of the State Police.

In addition, Demers is urging parents to remind school aged children of proper safety procedures while walking to and from school and while waiting for school buses.

Demers also said Maine law mandates that drivers stop when a school bus's red lights are flashing. The chief said, "Violating that law is not only dangerous, but expensive. The minimum fine is $275 for passing a stopped school bus."

A week in the life of HILLARY HARRISON

I'm back! Last week I was on vacation in Canada. The first day we stayed in Kingston, and the motel we stayed at had an indoor waterslide that was really cool. The next day we went to Niagara Falls, they were beautiful. We spent two nights there.

While in Niagara Falls, we took three tunnels that went to different parts of the waterfalls. The first tunnel went right next to the falls. We had to wear rain jackets and we still got soaked from the spray coming from the falls.

The other two tunnels were actually under the falls, we could touch them. That was awesome. We also got soaked when we took a boat right up to the falls. Seeing them right up close was a spectacular experience.

After our two nights in Niagara Falls, we went to Toronto. Did some shopping and stuff like that. Then we went to Montreal and shopped 'til we dropped in the world's biggest mall.

Well as you can tell it was an awesome vacation. I suggest Niagara Falls for any vacation.

NEW FACES—SAD #44 has hired six new teachers this year and one student teacher will be job shadowing. They include, front row, Meg Ford, left, Woodstock Elementary School student teacher; Kirsten Mattson, Crescent Park School third grade teacher; Kristan Connor, Telstar Middle School language arts teacher; Lillian Conant, Telstar High School home economics teacher; Nancy Merrow, Adult Ed. teacher and Joan Casey, Spec. Ed. consulting teacher. Back row, Anne Burg, THS foreign language teacher; Ted Davis, THS principal; Dave Murphy, CPS principal; Bruce Bell, TMS principal; Frank Boynton, WES principal and Ann Holt, Special Ed. Director.

Former Woodstock youngster is off and running in N.H.

A former Woodstock Elementary School student, now of Contoocook, N.H., is rapidly making her mark in New Hampshire track events.

Beth Putnam recently won the Hershey Track Meet 400 meter dash for nine to 10 year olds with ease, finishing a near two full seconds over Kerri Fitzpatrick of Nashua, N.H.

Beth later went on in the position of anchor in the 400-meter relay to bring her team to victory with a time of 1:08 in the July 18 event.

There were over 800 youngsters competing in this track meet, sponsored by the Hershey Chocolate Company. There are meets held in every state and the winners with the top times go on as representatives of their state to the national meet in Hershey, Pa.

Although Beth did not earn the representative position, she was the only participant in the Rochester meet to pull down three blue ribbons.

"I really liked all the cheering. It made working out with my dad worth it," she said. Pleased with her times and proud of her blue ribbons, Beth said she was somewhat relieved to learn she would not be going to the national meet.

Beth is the daughter of James and Denise Putnam and sister of Kate and Andrew, all formerly of Woodstock.

Telstar ITV will offer workplace safety course

Managers at all levels of every organization need to know more about how to make their workplace safer and healthier in order to comply with OSHA standards and to avoid work-related illnesses and injuries that can lead to workers' compensation claims.

The Center for Occupational Health and Safety at Central Maine Technical College in Auburn and the Maine Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Standards have developed a new course to help managers meet this challenge.

"Occupational Health and Safety for Managers" is a 15-week course which will air on the Community College of Maine's Interactive Television System (ITV) on Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 8:30 a.m. to 9:55 a.m. beginning Sept. 3. Each topic will be taught by an expert in the field to give participants a practical approach to such important and timely topics as OSHA and environmental laws, criminal liability for work related illnesses and injuries; use of computers to manage illness and injury information, the state's new toxics use reduction law and prevention strategies in ergonomics and other common work-related hazards. Cost for the course will be $125.

The course will originate from the University of Maine at Augusta and will be available at ITV sites including Telstar High School.

Two Telstar students awarded scholarships

Jessica Fogg of Locke Mills and Katherine Stevens of Bethel have been awarded scholarships by the Maine Imkekeepers Association in Portland.

The scholarships were given to students who have enrolled in hotel administration or culinary arts programs at accredited schools which offer a concentrated course of study in these hospitality industry-related specialties.

Jessica, daughter of Nancy L. Fogg, is a 1991 graduate of Telstar High School. She is planning to enter Central Maine Technical College in Auburn this fall. Jessica will study culinary arts.

Katherine, daughter of Alvin and Alice Stevens, is also a 1991 Telstar graduate. Katherine is enrolled at New Hampshire Technical College, where she will also study culinary arts.

The Maine Imkekeepers Association scholarship fund was created to help future members of the hospitality industry by contributing to college related expenses.

Eric Wight receives engineering grant

Eric Wight, son of Steve and Peggy Wight of Sunday River Inn in Newry, recently received a research assistance grant from the University of Maine at Orono.

The grant will enable him to work toward a masters degree in bio-resource engineering with particular interest in developing technology for composting of municipal solid waste and recycling of waste products.

Eric graduated from Wentworth Institute of Technology in 1988 with an associate degree in mechanical engineering technology and from UMO in 1990 with a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering technology.

Endometriosis: New Medicines Approved

Endometriosis is a painful and frustrating condition which affects millions of women, especially women between ages 30 and 40. Endometriosis results when endometrial tissue (normally found inside the uterus) attaches itself to the ovaries, fallopian tubes, bladder, or other areas in the abdomen outside the uterus. Sometimes blood-filled pockets or cysts (called "chocolate cysts") form on the affected organs.

Until recently, the prescription medicines most often used in the treatment of endometriosis were the oral contraceptives (birth control pills) and danazol. These medicines have proven benefits in halting the condition, reducing pain, and shrinking endometrial tissue. In 1990, two promising new medicines, nafarelin acetate and leuprolide acetate, were approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for the treatment of endometriosis. According to a report in Pharmacy Times, these two medicines are referred to as GnRH (gonadotropin-releasing hormone) agonists. These newer medicines work by reducing body estrogen levels.

If medicines are not effective, surgery may be required to remove endometrial tissue. Sometimes it is necessary to have the ovaries and the uterus removed.

winter so it will be accessible in case of fire.

The building will also be heated to about 50 degrees to prevent peeling plaster and keep the ceilings from cracking. Craig said he couldn't estimate what the overall savings on the fuel bill will be.

It's also possible that the Adult Education Department might use some space in the building's annex section. In the past, Adult Ed. has rented space at various facilities in town for some of its classes, Craig said.

(The matter of keeping EBS open and heated will be discussed at a special meeting of the SAD #44 board, scheduled for 7 p.m. tomorrow (Thursday) in the Telstar library.)

Sports, bus cutbacks

SAD #44, like other districts in the Mountain Valley Conference, has also trimmed its sports schedule.

Craig said overall, non-school-day transportation has been cut by 12 percent. The cuts spared just enough games to keep Telstar eligible for participation in the league.

Bus schedules have also been altered to save money. Kindergarten buses, for example, will come to CPS after the morning session already loaded with the afternoon students. Last year mornings students were dropped off first, then afternoon students were picked up. Transportation Director Sonny Blake also said that because there are fewer kindergarten students this year, there will be two fewer buses used to transport kindergarten students at mid-day.

Outlook bleak

Also hanging over the districts head is the possibility of the state either failing to come through with promised funds, or dragging its feet in sending out the checks.

In case this happens the school board has granted Craig the authority to borrow up to $200,000 on an as-needed basis to cover expenses, such as payroll, until state funds arrive.

As for next year, the future looks bleak for any increase in state funding. The state has already informed districts that it will no longer provide any subsidy for transportation costs of field trips and sports.

Craig said he is also concerned that the district may have to cut more teachers. "If you look around and compare us to other schools in the area we've got great student to teacher ratios. But we may not be able to afford the student/teacher ratios that we have this year next year in FY '93. I could have a lot less to work with next year."

Subdivision planned for Stowell mill site on Lake Christopher Gordon Brown of Bryant Pond has received preliminary approval from the Woodstock Planning Board for a four-lot subdivision on the site of the former Stowell Wood Products mill on the shore of Lake Christopher.

Gordon purchased the property at a foreclosure auction in February 1989, a few months after the mill went out of business for the final time.

Each of the lots in the proposed subdivision will be just over an acre in size and will have at least 200 feet of lakeshore frontage, Brown said.

He added that he had already sold one of the lots and planned to keep another for his own use.

Brown said he hoped to complete tearing down the old mill buildings by April 1992, in order to avoid paying taxes on them for another year.

Final approval of the subdivision could come at the planning board's Sept. 4 meeting. No public hearing is currently planned for the project.

MILL SITE SUBDIVISION—The former Stowell Wood Products mill in Bryant Pond will be the site of a four-lot, lakeside subdivision. Developer Gordon Brown said he hopes to have the old building torn down by next spring.

Test scores

some areas of the tests, girls in others, but the total scores for two sexes tend to balance out. For example, in the latest tests boys averaged 272 across the six content areas, while girls averaged 274.

In SAD #44, however, MEA results often show girls outperforming boys in most, if not all, areas of the test, sometimes by wide margins.

In the latest results, for example, scores for SAD #44 boys were generally at the state level, while local girls significantly exceeded the state level in all six content areas on the test.

SAD #44 boys achieved the highest possible score, of 400, in science, and local girls achieved their own 400 in reading.

But across all six content areas, local boys scored, on average, nearly 70 points below their female classmates, with the widest disparities coming in writing (boys 182, girls 334) and reading (boys 252, girls 400). (The standard deviation for the test is 50 points.)

Superintendent of Schools DeWaine Craig said he had no explanation for this apparent disparity in the academic achievement of SAD #44 boys and girls.

How the state testing works

The Maine Educational Assessment Act of 1984. Each year since 1985, all fourth-, eighth- and eleventh-graders in the state's public schools take a four- to five-hour standardized achievement test. The test measures the students' level of achievement in six content areas: reading, writing, mathematics, science, social studies and humanities.

Results of the test are reported for individual students, schools and school districts. The results for each content area are scored in a range from 100 (the lowest possible score) to 400 (the highest), with the average for all students in the state scaled to 250 (in some cases the state average must be calculated somewhat higher or lower than 250, but it is usually in the 240-265 range). The standard deviation on the test is 50 points.

The results are further broken down in a variety of ways. For example, scores are also reported for specific subtopics which compose each of the six larger content areas. Thus, within the content area of mathematics the skills of geometry, measurement, problem solving, etc. are also measured and reported.

In addition, the results include a Subgroup Report section which looks at such factors as a student's gender, attitudes toward different subjects, work habits, career plans and the educational background of their parents. This section, for example, makes it possible to compare the content-area scores of children who have college-educated parents with those of their classmates whose parents completed only high school. The scores for each of these groups within a school can also be compared to the scores for similar students statewide.

The test report returned to the school district also provides "comparison score bands," which show the range of scores for school districts across the state with similar social and economic characteristics.

Test results typically fluctuate from year to year as different classes pass through the school system. Educational administrators caution against drawing large conclusions from these yearly variations. The comparison of a single class over time, however (as is now possible for eighth- and eleventh-graders) provides "added meaning and value in assessing the effectiveness of our educational programs," according to Eve Blither, commissioner of the State Department of Educational and Cultural Services.

Parents also said that after the bus made it safely down Route 5 to Route 2 on icy winter roads, they did not want the bus leaving the main route again to make the run into Newry.

"The day my kids were born," said Emerson, "I started to dread that ride to Telstar—and now they'll have to ride 33 percent longer. That's a long part of their life totally wasted."

Another parent complained that because her daughter would be forced to get out of bed a half hour early it would change "her whole life schedule. ... It's sick of Andover always having to put up with stuff like this."

District Administrative Assistant Bruce Powell thanked the parents for their comments and asked them to give the district the first few days of school to see how the new bus schedule worked.

"Give me Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at least to review the situation," Powell said. "We'll take a look at it again. We should be able to make a change the following week if necessary."

Powell said he would phone the families involved on Monday and update them on any proposed changes to the present schedule.

EBS staying open?
Andover parents weren't they only ones crying foul to district administrator's Monday night.

Bethel director Merton Brown said that it was his understanding at budget time that the Ethel Bisbee School in Bethel would be closed to students and all other activities other than storage. But now, he said, he had heard there was some use of the building being planned by district administrators.

"It was very clear to me that the school was going to be closed to save money," he said later. "We were told it was going to be used for storage and the district would retain it for a year to see how the dust settled at Crescent Park School. And I think that to have it used for any other purpose is not what was approved for the FY '92 budget. This year they said it was going to be closed, and I think we owe it to the taxpayer to keep it closed. To me 'closed' means 'closed.'"

But Superintendent DeWaine Craig said that was not the message given out at budget time. Craig said he told the board EBS would be closed to use by elementary students. He added that the district is having trouble finding classroom space for Adult Education. "We now have some space that is not being used for elementary education that could be used for Adult Ed.," he said.

The board will discuss the issue at a special board meeting, tomorrow, Aug. 29, 7 p.m. at the Telstar Library. The board scheduled the special Thursday meeting for an executive session to discuss a student disciplinary matter.

Brown requested that the board also discuss the use of EBS at that time. The EBS discussion will be open to the public.

On Monday night the board also approved the second reading of a policy change that puts an end to board directors serving as substitute district personnel.

MEA test results

In other business, Telstar High School Principal Ted Davis reviewed eleventh grade MEA scores. "We can be very proud of our seniors this year," he said. "Eleven students, or 17 percent of the class, scored in the 95th percentile or better in reading, writing or arithmetic. Two students scored above in two of those areas. The area that we did the poorest in was writing, and we will be looking at the English Department. But schools that are going to improve in their writing scores take a holistic approach. You can't rely on just the English Department to improve writing scores." Davis said he will encourage all departments to stress writing skills.

The board also voted to change the March 13, 1992 educational development day to Friday, March 20, 1992, in the 1991-92 school calendar. The directors approved a slate of substitute and adult education teachers for the upcoming school year. The board also approved the appointment of Kirsten A. Mattson as CPS third grade teacher and Kathi Schandelmeier as Telstar clerk/receptionist-computer operator, and accepted the resignation of bus driver Sandra Gunther.

The cake was made by the niece of the bride, Patty Knapp. The group danced to music provided by "F-Troop" and Mrs. White's cousin, Robert Hodgkins. Guests attended from this area and other states including, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, Colorado, New Jersey and Florida. Family and friends staying in town include Mr. and Mrs. Troy Plantier and children of Colorado, Joanne and Robert Slack of New Jersey, Lynne and Michael Plantier of Maryland and Tommy, Vincent and Denise Slack and friend David also of New Jersey.

Not a very nice morning and the warnings of Hurricane Bob don't sound too good but hope we don't get too much of it. We can use more rain but don't need raging winds or any of that stuff. It sure has been hot and humid in the past few days and we could stand some cooler air but don't need a hurricane to do that.

We don't usually get them very hard this far inland but I remember one when my son was small and we lived on the Waterford Road that was a dilly. There was a white birch tree in our yard that had roots that reached under the edge of the house and every time the wind blew hard, the house would lift up. Not a very good feeling with four young boys around as I had some state children at that time. It wasn't about to leave them upstairs with that going on so they slept on the floor downstairs that night, that is, what sleep they got which wasn't too much as they were scared. I'm afraid I don't like high winds blowing at all since that time.

Thursday evening was Grange meeting at West Paris and we had been asked to be in the program so went to that. It was an open meeting and lots of nice community citizen awards were given out and a presentation of a money tree was given to past master Lewis Marcotte who was master of the Grange for many years. Lots of music of different kinds were on the program and a little talk by Dana Hanley on legislature was given. He made a lot of sense and wish more of them at Augusta made sense. It was a very enjoyable evening.

Not much news from Mary this week as she has been so busy she couldn't think just what she had done for good things to put in the paper. The family goes to camp at times and has a good time but she told of folks harassing some loons on the lake with their little one. That seems a shame as they need to be left alone to care for the little ones the way Mother Nature meant for them to do without interruption from anyone.

Jennie Haverinen spent a day with the Lovejoy girls for some fun for all. West Paris Grange will be having their next dance on Sept. 7th. Write it on your calendar so you won't forget it and come for the usual good time.

Take care one and all and have a good week ahead.

Tri-Town

ed life support measures. Bacon said people sometimes complain when PACE is called in, because they are much more expensive than Tri-Town. Tri-Town charges less than what the state recommends a service of its type charge, Archer said.

Tri-Town bills $30 for the call and $3 per loaded mile—that is, when a patient is in the ambulance.

PACE, however, charges $290 for the call and $5 per mile to the patient's home and then to the hospital.

"Anytime we call PACE it's for the patient's benefit," Bacon said, adding that less than 15 percent of Tri-Town's calls require back-up from PACE. "Having PACE available often reduces the cost of the patient spending time in intensive care at the hospital, because they're getting treatment quicker," Archer said.

If Tri-Town were to fold, local residents would be forced to call PACE for even routine calls.

But for now at least, there's no danger of that, Archer said. "We have a cushion now," she said. "We're scrapping and tightening our belts."

"The ambulance will still roll if people call for it," Bacon said.

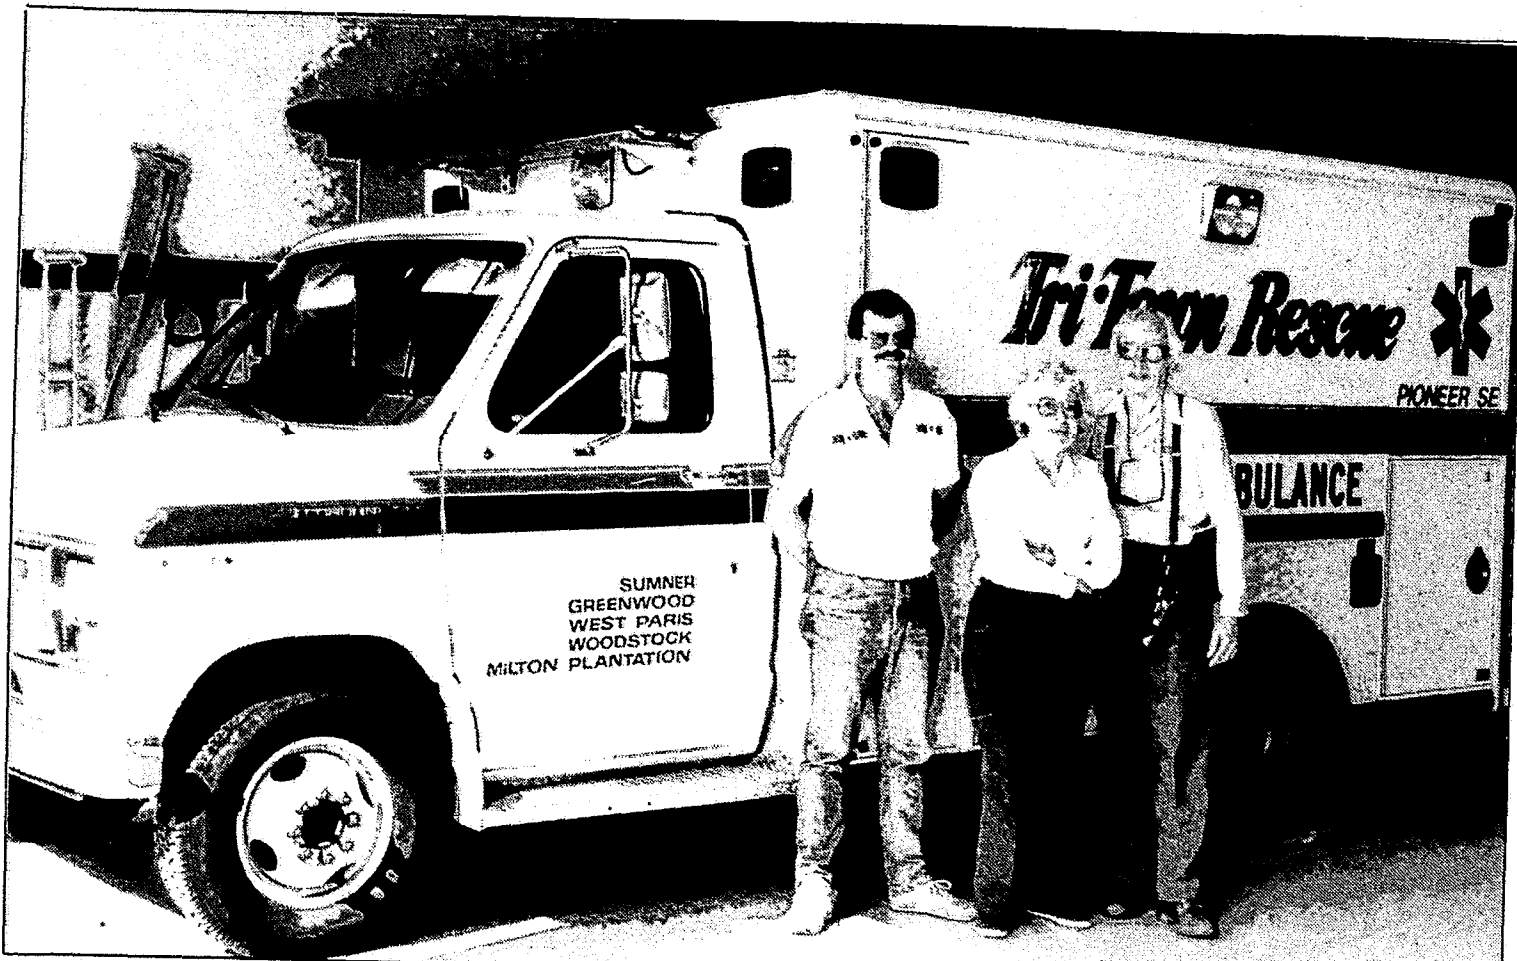

But, he said, "We need volunteers to help in all capacities. There are other things people can do if they don't want to do hands-on patient care. We've tried to spare the taxpayer of the whole bill at town meeting time. We have had the auxiliary to raise the money. If the taxpayer had to brunt the pure expense of the service, tax bills would double. We want to prevent an erosion of our income and a decrease in the services we provide. We want to cover our territory 24 hours a day, seven days a week and have enough money to support it. People volunteering for the service are going to save themselves tax money. Right now there's not an imminent threat that we'll go under, but we don't ever want to get close to that point either."

The Greenwood Fire Department will resume monthly meetings in September, the first and third Wednesdays. The meeting will start at 7 p.m. on Sept. 4.

My apologies for no news last week. I was picking up my daughter for a two week visit. She had come part way from Presque Isle with her mother-in-law, who planned to visit her daughter in Vermont. It's been nice to have her home and we've been busy visiting friends and relatives. We got to see, among others, Thelma Merrill, Elvira Littlehale, Carolyn Colby along with Brian and Carl, Debbie Brown, Leona Flint and Linda and Tom Gibbs. Her brother, Ralph, from Colchester, Vt.

DEDICATED CREW—EMT Ken Bacon, left, Ambulance Chief Grace Archer, Communications Chief Harry Archer. The service is starting to see a decline in community support and funding, so the call is going out for new ambulance attendants, auxiliary members and anyone else interested in supporting Tri-Town Rescue's efforts to provide low cost emergency medical services.

also came for the first weekend to help us with some of the late summer repair work around the house. Among other things, he insulated one room for us, and we all did some travelling and visiting so it was a busy time.

It hardly seems as if fall is right around the corner, but school is starting to leave and some are relieved that all the festivals and bazaars are over. It is fun, but work too, so it's nice to have a breather.

John and Alta Ludlam and family from East Bethel are leaving for St. Albans, Vt. where he has accepted an assistant pastor position with the St. Albans Assembly of God. Our present pastor came from that church so we are sort of returning the favor. When you read this we will have given them a going away party at the Locke Mills town hall, so next week I hope to have more news of that. I also hope to be able to get back in the swing of things a little better so maybe you folks can, too, and let me know of your goings on.

Thanks to all who have done work at the historical museum. Much must be done in and around the building in addition to watching it. Their efforts are a great help. The society has loaned a video to Channel IV. Rev. Hanson made it and gave a copy to the museum. If it is shown, thanks go to him. The historical museum will close Sept. 14, so visit while you can. Earle and Louisa Noyes donated some custard cups, two whistles and a sprayer to the museum. Louisa also displayed some of her genealogy records at the museum recently. A Sept. 7 also.

Grange was cancelled Monday evening because of Hurricane Bob. Next meeting will be installation of officers on Sept. 2.

The Woodstock Senior Citizens will meet on Thursday, Sept. 5 at the Grange Hall with the grange putting on the dinner.

Franklin Grange had a very successful variety show on Friday night.

The Universalist Church of Bryant Pond, (Unitarian-Universalist) will open on Sunday, Sept. 8, at 9 a.m. for weekly worship services. The church has had many improvements during the year, as the building was in need of repairing; new steel roofing and painting of the back roof, also repairing of the belfry. The paint on the church had darkened and mildewed, so the entire church building was washed on the outside.

On the inside, the walls were painted, also the windows, trims, floor, and railing. New carpet was purchased for the floor and the stairs to the Fellowship Hall were carpeted.

Guest ministers of previous years will again be in the pulpit every Sunday. The annual church meeting will be on Tuesday, Oct. 1 at the Fellowship Hall with a 5:30 p.m. supper preceding the business meeting at 7 p.m. All persons are invited to attend the church and share in the fellowship and love for one another.

Newry

Bea Lowell went on a senior citizens' trip to Kennebunk and Kennebunkport. The group had lunch in Ogunquit, then they went to Portsmouth for a short cruise.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Tetley have gone fishing with another couple. Some may remember that Norman had been called stormin' Norman by me—he had a laugh over it.

Richard Clark and Deputy Brad Wright were out in the hurricane getting the GTE lines working again in Locke Mills. I was out in the storm around 3 p.m. and glad to get in. That's what I get for being a civil defense director for the town.

On Aug. 17 I saw a visitor from Canada pull into our driveway. She was the niece of Kid Blair and was full of questions about who owns her uncle's camp now. Mother had a picture of the camp from around 1927, or so, that Barbara H. Brown had given mother. Mother gave this picture to the Blair's niece and she was thrilled. She was also thrilled to visit Screw Auger Falls Picnic Area. She liked what the state has done to the area.

Now a fun part of this column: Birthday boys. Coming up or have been are the following: Wee Willie, Alan Fleet, Marshal Fleet and Tink Conkright.

Ladies Circle for September will meet at my house at 12:30.

Wee Willie and his bride were up here during Bob's visit to Maine and weathered the storm very well. Hope there was not any damage done to their house back in Massachusetts. It's good to see them up here and we do get a few chuckles together.

My feet still haven't dried out from being out in the storm. The only problem that stormin' Bob caused was the lights went out in town from 7:10 p.m. to around midnight. The usual spot washed out on Route 26, near the Davis residence, although the new house is under construction, it stood up very well. Now if we can only get the road to stay from washing out. Of course the state calls the Newry section of Route 26 a secondary road, but it isn't according to both the French Canadians that do some low level flying along it and we who live off it.

Sorry to read that Gladys Kilgore of Stoneham has stopped being a reporter for the Citizen. She had been doing her column for the last 25 years and knowing a few people in Stoneham, she'll still be very active there in town. Stoneham is a nice village and has some friendly people there as well. Hope all Gladys' friends will help her out when she needs them. Hope also that she stays lively and healthy for plenty more years to come.

We are glad to report that Lettie Brooks is gaining nicely from her operation. Carl took Lettie, Esther Davis and Olive Davis to the variety show put on by Franklin Grange members and friends Friday night. Richard Felt acted as Master of Ceremonies which kept things moving right along. Donations were made every little while between the numbers. The gifts were given by different businesses in the towns and individuals.

Our Historical Museum is now a vital part of the town. It contains a little bit of everything. One can see antique furniture, china, glassware, old tools, photographs, books and so forth. I have a large frame of the daughter of President Hayes. She lived in Woodstock on the road going down toward the foot of the pond.

The Historical Society annual picnic was held at the museum because of rain. A nominating committee was chosen. Sandra Buck showed the members some of her rugs. Larry Billings had new donations for the club. Annie Crockett will have the program for the September meeting.

Esther Davis went on the following trip Thursday morning the 15th. Several people from the surrounding towns went on the Bethel Savings Bank Bus Tour. We left Oxford Hills High School at 7:45 a.m. in two buses and toured to Kennebunk, where we picked up a tour guide for each bus and continued on our journey to Kennebunkport, Cape Porpoise, Kennebunk Beach, Wells Beach, Ogunquit, and Portsmouth, N.H. There we took a boat ride to the Isle of Shoals. The tour guide pointed out places of interest all during the trip. We went by Arundel Golf Course which we would not have been allowed to do if President Bush had been out there playing at that time. We went by the driveway to the Bush compound at Walker's Point. An ambulance was at the end of the driveway and a police car and secret service vehicles. The entire trip was very interesting.

Esther Davis attended her Canton High School reunion at Canton Community Building, Saturday the 17th. There were 74 in attendance. Canton High School has been closed for several years but four years ago a committee was formed and reunions have been held each year since. There were over eighty at the first one.

Greenwood City

By COLISTA MORGAN

Since riding with Larry and Jean through Grafton Notch and beyond I have thought many times about the millions of people who converge into the mountains and notches of New England every summer. They come because of the scenery, the fishing, camping, hiking and just for the mountains. Even in this long settled and crowded corner, there are still wild and beautiful places hidden between the road lines on the maps. No one can see it all at once so they must go back again and again. More and more they leave the roads and take the trails. The trees are impressive. When one stands among them, the sound is the steady wash of wind through the tree tops above. There is the fragrance of pine needles and an abundance of young growth. The raw beauty of the mountains themselves, rearing high above the forests, the bare rocky rubble cradled near the summits is fascinating.

The scenery, as always, to me was grand and picturesque, from beginning to end. There were many places familiar to me and trails Ruth and I traveled.

I of course recalled other notches, Franconia, Kancamagus Highway and Crawford. The Great Stone Face and Boise Rock. I recalled and again thought of the little story which I read that took place in Franconia. "A little off the highway the notch is an enormous, oddly shaped rock set down by the ice at such an angle that under one side of it a dozen people could easily take shelter. This somber story is connected with it. Once in the early days, when the road was not much more than a trail, a lone horseman was making his way in the gloom of a cloudy day. The impending blizzard struck around him at a point near this rock; he had the wit to realize that he could not go on. The temperature was dropping rapidly. Even if he could find shelter under the rock, he might not survive the cold. Boise made a fast decision. He killed the horse, skinned it, dragged the still warm hide into the shelter of the glacial boulder and wrapped himself in it. When a search party found him, the traveler was alive but tightly frozen in."

"Wild the country bright the sky, Reminding one of time passed by/Lonely and still, as in peaceful sleep/A centuries-old scene, ever new/Sunsets brighter than red flame/Never two that are the same./Days of warmth and friendly sun./A cooling breeze when day is done./As time drew near for me to depart/The picture was tightly locked in my heart./Now in my memory's admiration/I daily review God's great creation."—Lucille Hunt Lain.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonas Holt attended a family get together with Leonas' three sisters and others of the family on Saturday, August 17 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Verrill, South Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Curtis and son and Rena Curtis were on a camping trip over the weekend.

My callers this week were Zilpha DiArenzo, Rena Curtis, Local, and Lucy Bragg, West Sumner.

The Holt families were at the farm on Sunday and several other callers. Some of the Inman family have been at camp Maplewood this week.

Remembering Edla Tamlander

For many years Edla Tamlander was our neighbor and friend here in Greenwood City.

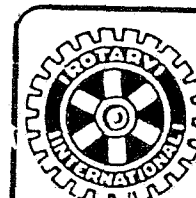

As we walk the road of life, we have many friends, but it is only once in a while that we are privileged to meet someone, who from the start, strikes a responsive chord in our heart, so that it seems as though we had known and loved them always. Our friend Edla, was like that, so we should pause from our regular routine to pay tribute to our much loved neighbor.

Her life was a shining example of tolerance and good citizenship. Cheerfully, wholeheartedly and without reservation she gave much to help others to be a little happier. The neighborhood children will always remember her cheery smile and unselfish deeds.

All that is good and noble we saw in the lovely life of this faithful friend.

Our community extends its sympathy to her two daughters and to her grandchildren.

Melville elected chair of Ch. IV association

The Channel IV Association Board of Directors elected Richard Melville of Greenwood as its chair at the Aug. 13 meeting.

Melville will head the association board for the remainder of 1991, with Patricia Dooen of Bethel serving as treasurer and Cathy Newell of Bethel as secretary.

The Channel IV Association is responsible for the operation of the community television channel, located at Telstar High School, serving the towns of Bethel, Greenwood, Newry, West Paris and Woodstock.

At the August meeting, it was announced that the Woodstock Historical Society of Bryant Pond has become the first sponsoring organization for Channel IV by contributing $50 to the association. The society has been an active participant in the bulletin board this summer, announcing special events and meetings.

It is hoped that other community groups who are interested in Channel IV will follow the lead of the Woodstock Historical Society by becoming sponsors of the channel. Organizations may contact an officer or board member for information on becoming a sponsoring organization.

NOTES FROM Evans Notch District White Mountain National Forest

The Evans Notch Ranger District of the White Mountains National Forest is currently developing a management plan for the recently designated Caribou-Speckled Mountain Wilderness.

The wilderness area, which includes 12,000 acres of land, lies entirely within Oxford County, east of State Route #113 and south of U.S. Highway #2.

Wilderness management emphasizes maintaining the natural integrity of ecosystems; minimizing the impact of users and management activities; and protecting the wilderness character and opportunities for education, challenge, and solitude.

Specific issues to be addressed in the plan are the management of backcountry camp sites, levels of maintenance of existing trails, levels of signage and blazing, protection of sensitive vegetation and minimizing visitor use impacts through education and/or other means.

District Ranger Chad Converse would be interested in receiving input and comments about the future management of this area. Comments should be sent to the U.S. Forest Service, RR2, Box 2270, Bethel, Maine 04217.

UPTON ROAD HAZARD—The new bus driver for Upton school children will have to be especially cautious of Grafton traffic hazards like the fellow above. Upton was left scrambling for a bus driver after last year's driver left town and no replacement was found. But the problem was solved before the opening day of school. Upton state educational agent Dewaine Craig mailed out notices to 53 households in Upton asking for anyone interested in driving Upton's three students to the Newry/Grafton town line to submit a bid. Two bids were submitted and the committee chose Terri Buchense as the new driver. Buchense was a school committee member, but she resigned her post and accepted the job. Upton was only planning on sending two children to SAD #44, but another family moved into town. Craig will meet with selectmen on Tuesday, Sept. 17 to discuss how to pay the third student's tuition. Upton will also have to pay more for transportation because the bus will have to make a mid-day run to pick up a kindergarten student.

Local seniors enjoy bus trip to the coast

Bethel Savings Bank, in conjunction with Destinations Unlimited of South Paris, sponsored a senior citizen bus trip last week.

Two buses, one from Bethel and one from South Paris, departed early Thursday morning for a fulfilled day of activity. Traveling with the groups were Jannine Buck and Althea Hathaway, both of Bethel Savings Bank, and Kathie Parker, a licensed practical nurse from the Bethel Area Health Center. The Bethel Area Health Center generously donated Parker's time to enable her to accompany the group.

The day's trip commenced with a tour of the Kennebunk area and a view of President Bush's house on Walker's Point. The group also saw President Bush's motorcade. The group then stopped for lunch at Barnacle Billy's in Ogunquit and ended with a tour of the Isle of Shoals out of Portsmouth Harbor.

Bethel Savings Bank plans to offer another senior citizen bus trip early in 1992.

CHAMBER WILL SPONSOR FORUM ON TURNPIKE WIDENING REFERENDUM

Thursday, Sept. 12, at 7 p.m. in the Telstar lecture hall is when all voters of our area are invited to get more information on the Referendum Question #1 of November's ballot.

Representatives from both sides of the issue will be present to offer the facts as they see them.

The Sensible Transportation Committee, which is against the proposed turnpike widening, urges voters to vote Yes on Question #1.

The Vote No on #1 Coalition (formerly called the Coalition for Responsible Government) will present a case for the turnpike widening.

The Chamber urges as many as are concerned about this issue to come to this meeting.

Mahoosuc Arts Notes

The Mahoosuc Arts Programming Committee worked this summer to schedule the 1991-92 season and meet the requests of a variety of audiences.

The Fall Vaudeville Review, directed by Benny Heel of New England Vaudeville Review, will kick off the season on Friday, Sept. 17 at 7 p.m. in the Helen Berry Auditorium at Telstar High School in Bethel.

Other evening performances will include dramatist Ladjamaya in October; a Cajun music concert/dance in November; the Messiah Sing in December; Al Miller's Theater Project in January; children's songwriter and performer Rick Charette in February; a Contra Dance in March; Bert Lucarelli—oboe and harp in early April; The Charleston Ballet performing "Alice in Wonderland" in late April and a performance by the Art of Black Dance in May. Dates and times for all these performances will be mailed to residents of the SAD #44 communities in early September.

In other Mahoosuc Arts news, the Council is looking for a new T-shirt design for the 1992 annual EARLY TOMATOES READY—Joel Doyon's tomato was the first, and winning, entry in the Bethel Farmers Market first tomato contest. The tomato was grown from plants provided by the Farmers Market. Kate Slattery presented Joel with his prize.

Hike/Walk/Run scheduled for Oct. 12 at Sunday River Ski Resort. Area artists who would like to submit paintings or drawings may bring them to the Mahoosuc Arts' office at Gould Academy by Sept. 6. This annual fundraising event, the Hike/Walk/Run, is designed for family hikers as well as serious runners. For more information please call the Mahoosuc office at 824-3575.

From the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce

As the summer season begins to draw to a close we can reflect on what a busy one it was for the Chamber and in the community. Many thanks to all the volunteers that offered to hand out information to the incoming NTL participants and also those who gave the welcome talks.

The Task Force, originally formed when NTL announced their plans to leave Bethel, is still very active. Many thanks to all those volunteers who are meeting weekly to plan for the November Conference and to keep the lines of communication open with NTL. We are grateful for all their hard work and efforts to help the NTL board modify the original decision.

The Chamber is planning for an autumn promotion which will hopefully attract a southern Maine and the "impulse" traveler to come to our area to enjoy the beautiful foliage and autumn activities. Wende Gray, of Gray Marketing, is helping to pull this program together.

The Chamber is also having the opportunity to send our regional brochure to the Halifax, Nova Scotia and Montreal, Quebec Ski Shows. A group of lodging owners, with the help of Sunday River Ski Resort, have pooled their resources and reserved a booth space at each show. It is known that the Canadians are a great market for the Bethel area.

The Chamber is also planning to go to the Eastern States Exposition in West Springfield, Mass. from Sept. 10-22 to represent the Western Mountains and Lakes Region of our state. We will be joining the Chambers of the Sugarloaf Area, the Rangeley Lakes Area, the Western Maine Mountain Area (Jay, Wilton, Farmington), the Oxford Hills Area and the Bridgton Lakes Region Chamber. Truly a regional effort. Volunteers from this area will include Bill and Ernestine Riley, Ed and Mary Jo Kennett, and Robin Zinchuk. There are a couple of slots still open. If you are interested call the office.

Many thanks go to Brenda Hart, a recent Telstar High School graduate, who worked in our office this summer. Brenda was a great help and we wish her the best in her future endeavors.

The board of directors will be meeting on Thursday, Sept. 12, for the regular monthly meeting.

Welcome to the newest member of our executive committee, Linda Varrell, our president elect.

Gordon's wife, Susan, said Monday she knew nothing of the signing. She said the commissioner had promised to fax a copy of the license as soon as it was signed.

The license reportedly includes a consent agreement, but details of it were unavailable at presstime.

A previous consent agreement between Gordon and the DEP obligates him to remove all 30,000 scrap tires from the Leonard Kimball property in Albany Township by Nov. 1; and remove a minimum of 24,000 tires from Gordon's Tire Barn, also in Albany Township. Gordon also agreed to a $1,500 penalty and a $250-per-day fine for every day of violation.

Marriott promised selectmen at a meeting on Aug. 1 in Augusta that there will be periodic inspections of all three sites from now until Nov. 1 to assure compliance to the agreement. DEP submitted an application to the DEP for a license to operate a tire disposal facility on the Rabbit Road in Greenwood in November 1986. The application was returned because of a moratorium on licensing all new commercial waste disposal areas.

DEP representatives inspected two unlicensed tire disposal facilities operated by Gordon in Albany Township at that time and issued the owner a notice of violation.

Almost two years later, in September 1988, Gordon reapplied for a permit to operate the Greenwood site, proposing to establish seven scrap tire storage cells of 10,000 square feet each.

That same month, Greenwood adopted an Ordinance Regulating Waste Oil and Used Tires and in November declared Gordon's facility in violation of the ordinance. They requested that DEP hold a public hearing on the matter.

In January 1989, Gordon applied for a permit from the Town of Greenwood to operate the tire storage facility and was turned down the following month by the planning board on grounds that the permit application was incomplete. In particular, the board cited inadequate survey documentation and the absence of final contour lines or provisions for the maintenance of the Rabbit Road and the Kendall Brook Bridge.

Nearly a year later, in January, DEP representatives inspected the Greenwood site again and determined that "a continuation of present methods of stacking could result in the storage of over 1,000,000 tires" at the site.

Another inspection was done by the DEP in April 1990.

The Greenwood and Bethel site departments conducted their own site inspection of the pile the following month and determined "the Rabbit Road would be inaccessible to fire equipment during the spring mud season, floods and periods of sustained heavy rains."

Greenwood Code Enforcement Officer Sam Timberlake then issued Gordon an order "to immediately stop all activities at the site related to handling, storage, or disposal of used tires."

The order was apparently ignored. The DEP came back for another inspection in June 1990 and issued Gordon a stop order, directing him to "immediately cease the transportation of tires to the site for storage until a permit for that purpose is obtained."

Three more DEP inspections on site were held in August and October 1990 and in February of this year.

Gordon signed the consent agreement with DEP in June, and Greenwood selectmen learned soon after of Marriott's plan to license the Greenwood operation.

Andover to join B.A.R. recycling program

By BARBARA ADAMS

Andover selectmen voted last week to have Selectman Brian Mills sign a preliminary agreement with the Brian A. Rogers Company of Oxford, for rental of a recycling container and town inclusion in the company's recycling program.

The town will rent one container for $47.25 per week for a minimum of two years, from Nov. 1, 1991, to Oct. 31, 1993.

The town is not committed to the company hauling the recycling containers, but B.A.R. spokesman Larry Roakes said the cost for hauling is $120. The company will accept the recycling material in Oxford and may or may not charge by the ton for the material, depending on the market value of the material.

If material transported to the Oxford recycling facility is determined to be contaminated, the town will pay all cost of disposing of the material. The company will guarantee that the charge for taking recycled material will not go above the town's tipping fee at the town's disposal point, or the town will be able to send their recycled material elsewhere.

Prior to receiving the recycling container on or before Nov. 1 at the present landfill, the town is required to have a 6 ft. 6 in. concrete wall built.

Roakes said he will have a computer printed contract drawn up, which requires the signatures of the whole board. A public informational meeting will be held by Roakes, either the second or third week of October to educate the residents on recycling methods.

Emerson also asked once again that townspeople disagreeing with their tax bills not vent their frustration or anger on either Town Clerk Kathy Williamson, or Town Administrative Assistant Rebecca Schachter.

Schachter was confronted in a hostile manner by an irate taxpayer last week and the board stated that any further incidents of this nature will be reported to the police.
